Do you need more time to submit your disaster loan application?

SBA is still accepting applications for disaster assistance

We understand there can be various reasons that may have delayed your disaster loan application submission. We want to ensure you have enough time to complete your loan application with SBA. There is still time to apply for a disaster loan to support your recovery.

Submitting a late disaster loan application?

SBA will accept all disaster loan applications up to 60 days after the filing deadline without an explanation of why you were delayed. You can apply online using the MySBA Portal at <https://lending.sba.gov>.

This declaration's filing deadline has ended.

You may still apply through MySBA Portal.

Submitting a disaster loan application more than 60 days past the filing deadline?

SBA may accept applications received more than 60 days after the deadline when the SBA determines the late filing resulted from causes essentially beyond your control. You can request assistance with a late application by contacting the SBA Customer Service Center (CSC) via email at disastercustomerservice@sba.gov or by phone at 1-800-659-2955 (TTY: 7-1-1), or in person at an SBA Recovery Center.
